To provide appropriate levels of training for general school staff and more advanced training for student assistance and the key staff members, VDH is offering two research-based, demonstrated suicide prevention training models: Question, Persuade, Refer (QPR), 1-3 hour presentation that is appropriate for all school staff (teachers, administrators, specialists, support staff, etc.) and Applied Suicide Intervention Skills Training (ASIST), a more advanced, two-day training model to help student assistance staff and other concerned staff members develop additional risk assessment and crisis intervention skills.

Both types of training are offered free of charge to Virginia middle and high schools, through funds provided by the Center for Disease Control and Prevention. Training can be conducted on site or regionally depending on specific needs.

I am interested in the following types of training (check all that apply):

- Question, Persuade, Refer (1-3 hours, appropriate for all school staff)
- Applied Suicide Intervention Skills Training (2 days, appropriate for student assistance staff and others)
- On-Site training at my school/division facility
- Sending staff to a regional training session
