VIRGINIA TEACHER OF THE YEAR PROGRAM

Part 1: General Information

Overview

Since 1964, Virginia has participated in the National Teacher of the Year Program, a project of the Council of Chief State School Officers (CCSSO), sponsored by the ING Foundation. In 2006, upon recommendation of the Advisory Board on Teacher Education and Licensure (ABTEL), the program formerly known as the Virginia Teacher of the Year program was renamed in honor of Dr. Mary V. Bicouvaris, the 1989 Virginia and National Teacher of the Year. The late Dr. Bicouvaris was a teacher of government and international relations in Hampton City Public Schools. She was Virginia's first National Teacher of the Year.

The Mary V. Bicouvaris Virginia Teacher of the Year Program honors teachers who represent the best in teaching in the Commonwealth of Virginia and the nation. The program provides school divisions the opportunity to recognize outstanding teachers and to focus positive public attention on education and the teaching profession. Those who are selected as Regional Teachers of the Year, Virginia Teachers of the Year, or finalists in the national competition become ambassadors for education and enjoy a lifetime of positive memories.

Qualifications

Individuals who possess current renewable Virginia teaching licenses and who teach in Virginia public or accredited nonpublic schools are eligible to participate in the Mary V. Bicouvaris Virginia Teacher of the Year program. Individuals holding provisional, special education conditional, or eligibility licenses are not eligible to participate. The program is open to all teachers, including school librarians, technology specialists, guidance counselors, and reading specialists. Candidates should be teachers who are exceptionally skilled and dedicated and who are planning to continue in an active teaching status. Candidates who accept administrative or supervisory positions will relinquish their eligibility. Teachers selected should have the respect and admiration of students, parents, and colleagues. Additionally, they should play active and meaningful roles in their communities as well as in their schools. Many candidates will have distinguished themselves as leaders in public education at the local, regional, and/or state levels. Candidates also should be poised, articulate, and knowledgeable about their teaching areas and education in general.

Numerous criteria are used in evaluating the nominees, but the most important is the ability to inspire the love of learning in students of all backgrounds and abilities. Candidates will be considered on the basis of the following criteria developed by the Council of Chief State School Officers:

- Concern for individual students and ability to inspire learning;
- Ability and willingness to work cooperatively with fellow professionals;

- Willingness to devote time and energy to activities that result in improved instruction for children;
- Ability to work effectively with the community;
- Desire to keep abreast of current educational theories and practices;
- Ability and willingness to make contributions to the field of education; and
- Ability to create and implement innovative educational practices.

Selection of Local Nominees

Virginia division superintendents are invited to nominate one teacher for state-level recognition. In addition, superintendents are encouraged to use the program as a basis for recognizing deserving teachers within the system. The selection procedures and guidelines within a school division are local decisions; however, the following suggestions are offered for local selection.

- Develop a democratic procedure that avoids the appearance of an arbitrary decision. For instance, the superintendent may ask building principals to use one of the following methods to select initial nominees: (1) a committee of building teachers; (2) a faculty council or advisory group; (3) a committee of teachers, parents, and the principal; (4) the entire school staff; (5) all teachers in the building; or (6) the principal, based on input from the faculty and staff.

- The nomination procedure at the division level should not be elaborate. After the school level selection, the candidates may then be considered by a committee of teachers, parents, administrators, school board members, community leaders, or other appropriate persons.
- All nominations should be made without regard to race, color, religion, sex, national origin, age, or disability. Teachers retiring from the profession at the end of the school year should not be nominated because the teacher must be active during the following school year.
- Local recognition should be an integral part of the selection process. Recognition need not be elaborate, but should involve public congratulations and appropriate awards to the teachers involved.
- It is important that time be allowed for the development of the nominee's portfolio. For that reason, the Department of Education encourages school divisions to make their selections known to the teachers as early as possible, so the teachers have adequate time to prepare the necessary materials, gather letters of support, and develop the written portions of the portfolio. The review of the written portfolio by the members of the selection panel is a critical first step in the selection process. The importance of developing a well-written portfolio free of grammatical and spelling errors cannot be overly emphasized.

Nonpublic School Participation

An individual possessing a current renewable Virginia teaching license in a nonpublic accredited school may be nominated to represent his/her school or diocese for participation in the Mary V. Bicouvaris Virginia Teacher of the Year Program. Nominations of persons holding provisional, special education conditional, or eligibility licenses are not acceptable. Portfolios should be sent directly to Dr. Melanie J. Biermann, coordinator of the Mary V. Bicouvaris Virginia Teacher of Year Program, Virginia Department of Education, at the address listed on page three.

Part 2: Application Procedure

A portfolio of information must be developed according to established guidelines. National and state review committees agree that the content and complete representation of the teacher in the portfolio are more important than an elaborate presentation. Candidates should provide a concise, well-thought-out text, presented in a neat and easy-to-read format. Candidates should present themselves clearly and professionally. Narratives should be checked carefully for spelling and typographical errors. While a typographical error may not eliminate a candidate, it certainly reflects unfavorably on the teacher and the profession.

State Selection Process

During the summer, the portfolios submitted to the Department of Education are reviewed by a panel representing professional associations and other educational groups. Panel members first read the portfolios and evaluate them independently using a pre-determined evaluation instrument, and then convene for a day to discuss the portfolios. By consensus, a regional teacher of the year from each of eight Superintendent’s Study Regions of the state is selected.

In the fall, the selection panel convenes in Richmond a second time to interview each of the eight regional teachers of the year. At the beginning of each interview, each teacher will address the panel for three minutes on an educational issue. The teachers will be notified of the topic in advance of the interview to allow time to prepare remarks. Following an initial address to the panel, each teacher is asked a standard set of interview questions regarding educational issues.

At the conclusion of the interviews, the panel revisits the strength of the written portfolios, and considers the introductory address and the response to the interview questions by each of the regional teachers of the year. Then from the regional teachers, the panel chooses the next Virginia Teacher of the Year. The individual's name is kept in confidence until the announcement at a special awards ceremony.

National Selection Process

Prior to November 10, 2007, the teacher representing Virginia in the national awards program will have the opportunity to revise his or her portfolio to accommodate any additional changes in requirements for the national program. The individual's portfolio and application are submitted as the state nominee by the Superintendent of Public Instruction to the Council of Chief State School Officers in Washington. The national selection process occurs during the period between December and March. The 2008 National Teacher of the Year will be introduced by the President at a White House ceremony during the third week of April 2008.

Relationship of Teachers of the Year to Department of Education

The focus of Virginia's program is to recognize and promote excellence in teaching. The selected Virginia teachers will continue their classroom responsibilities, but also will serve as ambassadors throughout the state in communicating the many contributions of the classroom teacher. The teachers make public appearances, participate in a state-sponsored teacher forum, and conduct other activities that help to meet the needs of local school divisions and recognize teachers for the quality of their teaching and leadership.
