390	The publisher will change the text to read:	On July 3, Lee ordered General George Pickett and his entire division to lead a charge across open land toward the Union army’s center. Joined by thousands more soldiers in what became known as Pickett’s Charge, they marched soldier to shoulder in a line half a mile wide. They were met by gunfire from Union troops, which controlled higher ground on the battlefield. This gave the Union an advantage, and they repelled, or turned back, the Confederates.
392	“Running text”	In September 1864, Sherman reached Atlanta. After burning most of the city, his army of 62,000 men set out for Savannah, Georgia.
392	Time Line Entry	September 1864 Sherman’s troops burn most of Atlanta
392	Question 13	Study the time line. How long after Sherman’s troops burned most of Atlanta did Lee surrender?
392	The publisher will delete the word quickly in reference to Lee’s decision to evacuate Richmond.	In the North, Grant’s army was defeating Lee’s smaller army. Lee was running out of troops and supplies
392	The publisher will qualify the extent of the burning of Richmond.	As they left, they set parts of the city on fire.
