Scared Stiff

1 Imagine driving down a country road past a huge, open field where goats are grazing. Some are lazily munching on weeds, while others are happily running and leaping about. Suddenly a truck backfires. BOOM! Just as suddenly, the goats fall to the ground.

2 A few moments pass. The goats pop back up onto their feet. What just happened? Well, the goats were scared stiff and dropped to the ground, but not all goats act like this. There is only one kind of goat that behaves this way when it is surprised. It is called a Tennessee Fainting Goat.

3 In the 1800s a man arrived in Marshall County, Tennessee. People say he came from Nova Scotia, Canada. The man had a few goats and one cow. Since the man did not talk much, no one knew where he got these goats. When he left, he took the cow, but he sold the goats.

4 The behavior of at least one of the goats was different from most others. Being frightened caused the goat's body to go stiff and sometimes fall over. No one had seen goats do this before. They began to call this new goat a Tennessee Fainting Goat.

5 This special kind of goat does not actually faint. They just look like they do. The fainting goats stay awake and not all of them really fall over. The baby goats, however, usually do fall over, but the good thing is they do not have far to fall. Some older ones learn to stand near something like a fence or a tree, just in case they are frightened.

- 6 Now there are about three thousand fainting goats in the United States. People who have these animals love them. Goats of this kind are gentle, smart, and playful. They just get scared stiff now and then. The moment of stiffness only lasts about ten or fifteen seconds. Then the goats are back on their feet, good as new.

Shootin' Hoops

- 1 Ms. Cooper worked with Meg, her daughter, to help her make free-throw shots. "A free-throw is when a player stands back at a line to make a basket with no other players trying to get the ball," explained Ms. Cooper. Standing at the free-throw line, Ms. Cooper dribbled the basketball. "Okay, Meg," she said to her eight-year-old daughter. "Put your right hand on top. Left hand on bottom. Aim toward the basket, and—shoot!" Meg watched as her mom's shot went into the net with a swish.
- 2 Meg tried it the same way. The ball didn't reach the net. "It's hard to throw it that far," she said.
- 3 "Here's another way," Mom said. "We used to call it 'granny style.' It might help you get started, until you get stronger." Then she showed Meg how to do it.
- 4 Holding the ball with both hands, Meg held it down in front of her legs. Then she pushed the ball upward, throwing it underhanded. Using both hands gave her enough power to push the ball up to the hoop. It went in!
- 5 Meg smiled happily, feeling encouraged. "I'll practice that way for now," she said.
- 6 Three months later, Meg entered a citywide free-throw contest called Shootin' Hoops. Whoever made the most free throws in two minutes would win the contest. Meg was entered in the nine-year-old and younger group.

- 7 During warm-ups, Meg noticed that all the other kids were shooting with one hand. She was the only one shooting “granny style.” She wondered if she should shoot with one hand. She knew she couldn’t, so she decided to do it her own way.
- 8 Meg’s turn came. There were some surprised laughs when she started shooting with two hands. She didn’t mind. She just kept shooting the ball into the hoop. Most of her throws made it in!
- 9 At the end of the two minutes, Meg had made 12 free throws. A boy named Andy had made 14. A girl named LaWanda had made 11. Meg came in second place in her age group!
- 10 Meg hung her Shootin’ Hoops medal up in her room. It was gold with a shiny red ribbon hanging from it. Nowhere on that medal did it say “Granny Style.” She had practiced hard and succeeded in her own way, without fretting or feeling bad about what other people thought.

9 In the first paragraph, the word swish is used for —

- B wishes she had not entered the contest

- G She enters Meg in a contest for younger kids.
- H She shows Meg an easier way to shoot baskets.
- J She makes Meg practice over and over with one hand.

A “Fishy” Dessert

Have you ever eaten the ocean? This dessert will show how you can!

What you will need:

- 1 box of blue JELL-O™
- 1 packet of unflavored JELL-O
- 1 bag of Goldfish™ crackers
- 1 bag of small marshmallows
- 1 box of green fruit strips
- 1 cup of ice cubes
- 1 cup of graham cracker crumbs
- 4 clear drinking glasses
- Water
- Measuring cup
- Large mixing bowl
- Spoon

What to do:

1. Open both boxes of JELL-O. Pour them into the large mixing bowl.
2. Have a grownup add two cups of boiling water and stir with a spoon. Then add two cups of cold water and stir.
3. Put 1 cup of ice cubes into the mixture. This will cool the JELL-O and make it thicken faster.
4. When the mixture is as thick as pudding, carefully spoon the JELL-O into the clear glasses until they are almost full.
5. Tear the green fruit strips into smaller strips. These will be the seaweed in your ocean dessert. Using your spoon, carefully push the fruit strips into different places in the JELL-O—some high and some low.
6. Tear the small marshmallows in half. Using your spoon, push these down into the JELL-O. These will be the bubbles for the fish.
7. Carefully push the Goldfish down into the JELL-O.
8. You should be able to see the marshmallow bubbles, the Goldfish, and the seaweed fruit strips from outside the glass.
9. Finally, sprinkle the graham cracker crumbs on top of the JELL-O along the edge of the glass. This should look like sand.
10. Place each glass in the refrigerator to cool for at least 15 minutes or until time to eat!

This recipe is untested. Do not try this at home.

Taj and Berto

- 1 The school bus had arrived. Taj's mother handed him a paper bag of warm samosas. This was his favorite food from his home in India. They were crispy bread pockets filled with potatoes, peas, almonds, and golden raisins. The house smelled spicy. It was hard to leave, but Taj kissed his mother goodbye and headed off to school.
- 2 When Taj arrived at school that morning, a new student named Berto was in class. Mrs. Grant asked, "Who will be Berto's helper?" Taj raised his hand. He wanted a chance to help this new boy just as some other children had helped him. One month ago Taj was the "new kid" from a faraway country.
- 3 Berto was from Puerto Rico. He spoke Spanish and English. Taj showed him around the classroom. Mrs. Grant let them go out for a school tour. Berto smiled often, asking many questions on their walk around school. Taj thought, "Maybe I have a new friend!"
- 4 Berto was lively. His long legs always seemed ready to run. At recess, Berto joined a soccer game. He fit right in with the athletic group. Sports looked like fun. Taj played, but his mind and body didn't work well together. The harder he tried, the worse he played.
- 5 Before noon, Berto met other students. Some of them spoke Spanish. "Oh, well," Taj thought. "Berto has found friends who speak the same language as he does."
- 6 At lunch, Taj sat with some friends. He opened his lunch sack and took out the samosas. They weren't warm anymore, but they were still good. Taj bit into a tasty samosa.
- 7 Taj saw Berto walking toward him. He came and sat right next to Taj. Berto pointed to Taj's lunch. "What's that?" he asked.

- 8 "Oh, no. He's going to make fun of my lunch," Taj thought.
- 9 Then Berto took something from a brown bag. It looked like a samosa. "See? I have one too! Mine's an empanada. It is spicy inside!"
